No surprise for Good Guys

The Good Guys for 1981 will not be surprised at their dinner on May 15. This year's Good Guys were informed of their honor at a small dinner on Tuesday night.

The Good Guys for 1981 are Bill Lopez and Howie Lafaver. Lopez is a Wilmington firefighter involved in activities such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and the firefighters annual Toys for Tots campaign at Christmas. Lafaver could be called 'Mr. Basketball' in Wilmington. He is the founder of the town's recreation basketball program.

The decision to inform the Good Guys of their nominations was to allow them to provide input as to who will be present at the dinner. In the past, some of the Good Guys found that the committee had missed a friend who really should have been at the Good Guy dinner.

Lopez and Lafaver were informed of their nominations at Rocco's Restaurant on Tuesday night. The dinner was attended only by the Good Guys of past years, and the two recipients, along with husbands and wives. The Good Guy award began at Rocco's in 1968. Several people had decided that such an award would befit Rocco. They went to his restaurant, ordered a dinner, and then presented him with an award.

The award subsequently became an annual event. Other recipients of the award have been Ray McNamara, Ralph Ambrose, Lil Woodside, Carl and Hazel Backman, Marion Boylen, Dick Duggan, Frank Sferazza, Jo O'Neil, Larry Noel, John Brown, Rico Catalano and Jack Cushing.

The 1981 Good Guy dinner will be held at the Sons of Italy Hall on Ballardvale Street on Friday, May 15. Tickets are available from any of the Good Guys.

Presenting the Good Guys

Wilmington's Carters - 'Bill Hen Two'

It stands on the corner of Bridge Lane and Shawheen Avenue, in Wilmington. It was built by a man named Eldad Carter, over 250 years ago. One hundred years ago it was the home of a man named William Henry Carter.

It is quite possible that the two men were not related. Tracing any one whose name is Carter, in eastern Middlesex county is not easy. There were five families in ancient Woburn named Carter, at least so the writer has been told. A present day Carter could be easily descended from any one of those families.

William Henry Carter was born in Burlington in 1843. He moved to Wilmington about 1870, and bought (it is believed) the old Carter farm. This particular Carter was the second of his name at that time, in Wilmington.

The first one lived in North Wilmington, in a home on High Street now the home of the Percicaro family. He had been, among other things, the Town Clerk, before the Civil War. He was probably born in Wilmington about 1813. There are no records to prove this.

When the Burlington born William Henry Carter moved into town the Wilmington born man became known as William Henry Carter One, and the Burlington native became known as William Henry Carter Two. This was, of course, a matter of convenience to the good people of Wilmington.

Then, as happens, their names were shortened. They acquired nicknames, one could say. Each of them acquired the nickname of Bill Hen Carter. Bill Hen Carter One lived in North Wilmington. Bill Hen Carter Two lived in West Wilmington, on Shawheen Avenue.

Bill Hen Two did not aspire to office, as far as the writer knows. He did get elected to the job of road commissioner. There were 10 of those gentlemen in Wilmington, each responsible for those roads which were near their home. That was not necessarily an honor, for it means, sometimes, working with pick and shovel in the spring time mud.

There was one notable feature about Bill Hen Two.

He never used foul language. He never swore. He never used, in vain, the name of the Lord. The strongest epithet in his vocabulary was Boston Baked Beans!

That could have been a trait in that particular branch of the families named Carter. Bill Hen's son, named Robert Daniel, who also served as a road commissioner in Wilmington was another man who, when he felt upset, was liable to use the Boston Baked Beans epithet, but never anything stronger.

Bill Hen Two was a man who was circumspect and careful about all the features of his life. There is the story for instance, of the time that Bill Hen was a pall bearer, at the funeral of Mrs. Doctor Frances Hiller.

Mrs. Doctor Hiller, MD, was Wilmington's best known resident for a number of reasons, most of them quite bizarre. Twenty years or so before she died she had two caskets made, one for herself and one for her husband, Dr. Henry Hiller. Each of the caskets was hand carved. Each was reported to have cost $10,000.

Made of teak, they were heavy. There were eight pall bearers, and each had a load to carry. All were in cut-aways, with tall silk hats. Bill Hen Two was one of those men.

The casket, the story is, was so big it could not go out the front door. It had to be passed out a window. Some of the pall bearers were inside, passing it out, and some were outside, receiving it.

There came a moment when Bill Hen had to do something about that tall silk hat he was wearing. He solved the problem by putting the hat on the casket.

That was something that was to bother Bill Hen for the rest of his life. Did he, in putting his hat on a casket which contained a body, commit a social error? Or, worse, did he commit some kind of a sin? He never was able to decide that point.

Ed Nelson Eames was another Wilmington resident. He was in the lumber business at a time when that was a profitable occupation. Although the records do not show it, he too was born in Wilmington, in a home which was at the corner of what is now Jones Avenue and Glen Road.

As a person of some wealth he was a prominent man. He became a selectman, and he served as moderator for a number of years. Among other things Ed Nelson Eames was one of those men who formed a Lodge of Masons in Wilmington, about 75 or 80 years ago.

About the year 1900 Ed bought a camera. It was a good camera. He had a book of directions. He worked with that camera, carefully. Before he died he gave the negatives to the late Harold Melzar, who in turn gave them to the publisher of the Town Crier.

For those who like to delve into the history of Wilmington those negatives are a valuable addition.

There is one problem. When, what year, did Ed Nelson take the pictures, and were all the pictures taken within a year or so? On February 4 the Town Crier published a story of the old West School. Bill Hen Two, his wife Lizzie Harnden, and his daughter, Jessie Currier were all a part of that story.

It so happens that Ed Nelson Eames took a picture of the home of Bill Hen Two. It is quite a picture, clear, in good focus.

The trolley wire for the street car that ran from Wilmington Square to Billerica can be seen. There is a huge pile of firewood in the yard, with a boy near the firewood. That boy may be Robert Daniel Carter, but perhaps it isn't. Anyway, Bill Hen didn't have to pay OPEC to keep his home warm in the winter.

Ed took a picture of the old Eldad Carter farm, and then took a picture of the Nichols farmhouse half a mile westward - the one that had been built by Capt. Timothy Walker, and was later owned by Alden Eames.

Then Ed took a picture of the Jaquith Elm, and he finally went up and took pictures of the old Middlesex Canal aqueduct, on the Wilmington-Billerica line.

With Ed was his son Harold, who later became Dr. Harold Eames, and the Carter boy - Robert Daniel. Those boys appear in some of the pictures. If one could judge their ages correctly one could say when Ed Nelson Eames took those pictures.

Harold was born October 17, 1880. Daniel Robert Carter was born April 14, 1886.

One of the pictures with this story shows those boys, on the wall of the aqueduct. How old were they, when that picture was taken? What year was that?

The street car pole, at left is gone. The woodpile is gone. So are some of the structures, but the home of Bill Hen Two, at the corner of Shawheen Ave. and Bridge Lane, is still a Wilmington landmark.

While others talk about town problems, Selectman Charlie Coldwell solves them. As this year's chairman, Coldwell has met the following issues head-on:

1. Townwide Sewerage - Problems allayed. Six contracts to be bid in April, the other five to follow shortly. Keep in mind the town would have lost substantial funding if this was not accomplished.

2. Water supply - No more study groups. A proposed solution will be presented at town meeting in the near future.

3. School addition - Coldwell has served as a two year member of the secondary school building committee whose proposal received overwhelming support by the voters after years of unsuccessful attempts.

4. Taxes - In spite of spiraling inflation, Tewksbury has maintained a stable tax rate during Coldwell's term as selectman.

5. Proposition 2½ - As selectman chairman, Coldwell proposed a rational two-step program that would implement this new law in such a way as to guarantee an orderly and rational operation of our town, keeping essential services uppermost in everyone's mind. At the meeting this plan was presented it received unanimous support of the board members present.

On April 4

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

On Monday, March 16, my car was sideswiped on Federal Street in Wilmington about 10:30 p.m. by another automobile which crossed the center line of the road. Instead of stopping to exchange identification with me, the driver of the other vehicle left the scene of the accident. A third vehicle followed this car at high speeds. Upon getting this irresponsible driver to pull over, these young men went over to the car, but it sped off the second time. They were able to get the license number, unfortunately, there is no record with the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

The police have been unable to locate the hit and run car. Moreover, I have been informed by my insurance company that damage to my car - over $1,000 - is not covered unless the other driver is identified.

A similar accident involving an irresponsible, negligent driver could happen to any member of this community. For this reason, I appeal to your readers to help in locating the lawbreaker by contacting me at 657-4034 or the Wilmington Police at 658-3331 to report any possible sightings of this car.

I would also like to take time to thank all the people who have come forward as witnesses to this accident. These young ladies and men are certainly an asset to our community, and I welcome the privilege of commending our young people for their actions. I also extend my appreciation to the Wilmington Police Dept. Officer McKenna for his assistance.

The hit and run car will have serious damage to the front left fender, with possible damage to the driver's door. It was heavily leaking water. The car has been identified as a green Chevrolet Nova, approximately 1975. This car may have gold paint on it from the accident.

If you have any information as to the location of this vehicle or driver, please contact either the Wilmington Police Dept. or myself. All calls will be kept confidential.

Thank you for any assistance you may give.

Dear Larz:

I would like to know who is responsible for making and enforcing regulations regarding school playgrounds.

The specific school I am referring to is the Wildwood. There is a fenced in playground. The gate, presumably to allow plows and/or fire apparatus through, was left open all the time for several years. Upon a previous complaint from me, it was supposed to be closed during school hours (not always strictly adhered to).

However, after school and on weekends the gate remains open. The problem this poses is that cars drive right into the schoolyard and drive around or park. Children cannot go and play without having to worry about dodging cars. Also, the hottop and grass have been severely damaged due to this.

That cars should be allowed to drive onto a school playground at any time endangering children's lives and destroying town property is very, very sad.

Sincerely,
Marcia R. DeFilippo

Another accident on Federal Hill

by Ron Morgese

Russell J. Bonvie Jr. of 46 Prince Street, Cambridge was the latest victim of the latest Federal Hill accident in Wilmington.

At 1:20 a.m. Saturday, Bonvie's 1978 Lincoln Continental was forced off Middlesex Avenue by an on-coming car.

Front end and undercarriage damages were sustained to Bonvie's car which was towed by A & S Towing. No injuries were reported, but the cause of this accident was similar to other recent Federal Hill mishaps. Federal Hill residents feel that something must be done before the next accident on the hill results in tragedy.

Susan Nickerson engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert D. Nickerson of Wilmington have announced the engagement of their daughter Susan Melinda to David J. Terzian, son of Mrs. Vahan J. Terzian of Lexington.

Miss Nickerson is a graduate of Wilmington High School, Class of 1976.

Her fiancé graduated from Lexington High School in 1974 and from Tufts University of Engineering in 1978 and has his Masters Degree from Cornell University 1979. He is presently employed by C.E. Maguire Engineering Firm of Waltham.

An April 1982 wedding is planned.

Correction

The Town Crier, in the week of March 25, reporting on the current appraisal of property in Wilmington, stated that the property appraisals would be completed this fall.

That report was in error. The property appraisals are expected to take over a year, and will be completed in the fall of 1982.

Honored for service at Boy Scout Awards Dinner

Nice award

Dick Stosez of Wilmington received the Webelo Den Leader Award, and a kiss from Carol Payne, Cub Scout Executive from Billerica at the recent dinner.

Nine Wilmington Scouters and three Tewksbury Scouters were among those honored at the Annual Awards dinner of the Greater Lowell Council of Boy Scouts. The dinner was held at the Speare House in Lowell on March 14, with about 200 Scouters and their spouses present.

William Caperci, the Unit Commissioner of Troop 63, Wilmington and Lawrence Flaherty, Scoutmaster of Troop 58, Wilmington received the District Award of Merit from the Greater Lowell Council. The award is given to Scouters who render service of an outstanding nature at the District level. To be rated as 'outstanding' in an organization that is built entirely of totally dedicated volunteers and professionals indicates the recipients standing, in the eyes of their peers.

Caperci was in Scouting as a boy in Quincy, where he reached the rank of Star Scout. When he first arrived in Wilmington he served as a committeeman with Pack 56, and went on to Troop 63, where he served as committeeman, Assistant Scoutmaster, Scouting Coordinator and Advancement Chairman. He is currently the Unit Commissioner for Troop 63, and the Assistant District Commissioner for Wilmington. He is also valuable as Assistant Roundtable Commissioner for the Council, and is the Committee Chairman of the Greater Lowell 1981 National Jamboree Troop.

Flaherty began his scouting career as a committeeman with Troop 58 of Wilmington. After two years he became the Scoutmaster. He again became a part of the committee, and became an Advisor in Troop Leadership. Since then he has returned to being Scoutmaster again, and currently serves in that capacity.

In the Lowell Council and District areas Flaherty has served as chairman of two Klondike Derbies, as Scoutmaster on Polaris, III, and on the staff of many other training courses and camporees over the past several years. As a member of the Catholic Lay Committee and the Archdiocesan Scout Committee he has chaired, or staffed the seven last Catholic Retreats.

Flaherty also serves as Coordinator for, and leader, for High Adventure in the Girl Scouts, is a Coordinator for the Civil Air Patrol, and is an Advisor for the Lynn Junior Sportsmen.

Other honors

Alice Hooper and Ann Rich of Wilmington received the Den Leaders Award. Dick Stosez, Wilmington, received the Webelo Den Leader Award.

Dave Goodall and Ronald Hebert of Tewksbury were given the Scouters Award.

Commissioners' Arrowheads were awarded to Warren Austin of Tewksbury and Louis Fillio, Mary Jones and Donna Lyndon of Wilmington.

Albert Deprez of Wilmington was awarded the Commissioner's Key.

Views On Dental Health

By RANDALL SMITH, D.D.S.

SCUBA DIVERS BEWARE

What does scuba diving have to do with dentistry? If you are a scuba diver, be sure to mention this to your dentist. Ask how the treatment you are having could affect you as a scuba diver. It could save you a lot of unnecessary pain and problems. For example:

If a scuba diver is being treated for root canal therapy which is temporized partially with cotton and he goes diving, complications can result and most probably will. In diving, the atmospheric pressure changes. In fact, the pressure increases tremendously with each foot you descend. When air is trapped within the cotton fibers in a root canal, the air will expand when the diver surfaces, resulting in a whooper of a toothache.

Even a filling which may have an air pocket can cause the diver problems on descent. The pressure is decreased (relative to the outside pressure of water) and the air pocket is compressed. This could cause pain - and even result in an imploded tooth. In either case, the diver is going to need a dentist in a hurry. This may be a problem, especially if you like to dive off remote islands.

A public service to promote better dental health.

Tewksbury-Wilmington Stars square off
Girls recreation basketball league All-Stars from Tewksbury and Wilmington played a pair of outstanding games with some super action Friday night at Tewksbury High School. The four All-Star squads will battle again this Sunday (April 5) at Wilmington High School with the first game starting at 1:30.

Tewksbury, Wilmington girls split

The Tewksbury Junior All-Stars defeated the Wilmington Juniors 39-20, while the Wilmington senior stars dropped the Tewksbury squad, 32-25 in the waning minutes of their game this past Friday night at the Tewksbury High School gym. The Tewksbury girls also played their counterparts from Belmont on Sunday, handily defeating both Belmont teams. The Tewksbury seniors won, 50-26, while the Tewksbury Juniors were victorious by a 45-12 margin.

In the Wilmington contest, the Tewksbury seniors were led by Missy Riddle's 12 points, as they came up on the short end of a hard fought battle. Laura Briggs and Mary Rheault were the defensive standouts for the Senior Stars. The Wilmington offensive effort was spread out, as Gail Lombard and Linda Nistico led the attack with six points each.

In the junior game, Tewksbury led all the way, as Stephanie Vultaggio with 10 points and Renee Lombardi with eight led the Stars' scoring attack. Stephanie Rhodes and Jeanne Sullivan were Tewksbury's defensive mainstays in this contest.

The Tewksbury senior stars broke open a tight first half game to unleash a second half scoring barrage led by Missy Riddle and Laura Briggs, with 14 and 12 points. Elaine Hill also chipped in with some clutch shooting to add eight points to the Tewksbury cause. Michelle Fluery, Peggy Edwards and Mary Rheault supplied tough defense for Tewksbury throughout the game. Joan Howick was Belmont's top point getter, as she popped in 10.

The Tewksbury juniors were awesome, as they broke into a 15 point lead early in the first period and never looked back. Renee Lombardi was Tewksbury's big gun, as she scored 12 points for the Stars along with grabbing many rebounds. Stephanie Rhodes scored nine points, Stephanie Vultaggio six and as Tricia Censullo, Debbie Byrne, Lori Zotto and Jeanne Sullivan all

Teams gear for important week

The Celtics defeated the Bullets, 21-18 in Tewksbury Youth Basketball action last week. Chris Macie was high man for the winners with nine points and Jimmy Damouras played a fine all-around game for the Bullets.

The Clippers downed the Bucks 46-34 behind Robbie Aylward, Bruce Williams, and Jay Kelley who scored 10, 8 and 6 points respectively. Bobby Ware came up with a good defensive effort for the winners. The Bucks' offense was paced by Bobby Dziadosz with 13 points, followed by Ron Ahlquist with 8 and Jeff Smith with four.

Timmy Boudreau dropped in two free throws with four seconds left in the game to spoil a tremendous second-half comeback by the Bulls and give the Spurs a 41-39 win. The Bulls' Ed Blades had tied the score with 10 seconds left to culminate a rally that wiped out an 11-point halftime deficit. Boudreau and Jim Larsen led the Spurs' attack with eight and seven points. Shawn Blades and Andy DiCiacio led the Bulls with eight points apiece. Steve Whelton and Mike Woodruff played fine games defensively for the Bulls.

Jimmy Field led the Rockets to a 42-37 win over the Clippers and a share of first place at the conclusion of the regular season schedule. Mike Bosia added 10 for the defending champs, while Matty Conserva was high scorer for the Clippers with 11 points, followed by Robbie Aylward with eight. Defensively, Scott Macie and Buddy McAllister came up with good efforts.

The Hawks defeated the Spurs, 73-35 to finish in a tie with the Rockets and force a playoff for the Senior Division championship this Wednesday, April 1 (8 p.m.) at the Dewing School.

Paul Sullivan led the way with 26 points for the Hawks, followed by the Kobelski brothers, Greg and Brian, with 16 each. Tommy Geraghty and Scott Fay played well defensively for the winners. The Spurs were paced by Bobby Briggs and Tommy Boudreau.

The Suns' team effort gave them the Junior Division championship for the second year in a row as an aggressive defense led by Sean Conway, Scott DeVivo, Geraghty, Erikson and Jeff Hart was able to check many scoring chances by the opposing teams. The offensive thrust was handled by Brooks, Prince, Kelley and Jay Rideout. First-year players who have great potential for next year are Chris Hart, Jeff Rideout, and Craig Goldsworthy.

Wednesday, April 1, at the Junior High School, (7:30 p.m.) two Junior Division All-

Star teams will battle it out for the right to meet the division champion Suns Sunday, April 5. The "A" team, coached by Jim Cunningham, will consist of the following players: Knicks- Scott Niles, Jimmy Cunningham, and John Melvin; Celtics-Bryan Cedorchuk, Robbie Busch, and Timmy Quinn; Nuggets-Mike Paglia, Mark Paglia, and Jim Fardin and Kings-Kevin O'Brien, Joe Kearns and John Sweeney.

The Tewksbury boys' traveling team came up with another outstanding effort the weekend of March 21 and 22, finishing second in the Mount Wachusett Community College Tournament in Division 2.

Tourney team romps
Saturday afternoon, the local entry buried Westminster, 53-21 in tournament quarter-final action as Timmy Boudreau led the way with 14 points, followed by Brian Kobelski with nine, and Jeff Smith, Al Piccolo, and Todd Simas with six points apiece.

The semifinal Sunday morning was the most exciting of the tournament, with Tewksbury trailing New Ipswich by 10 points at halftime before staging a furious second half rally to tie the game at 38-38 with seconds left in regulation. Tewksbury then scored the only three points in overtime to come up with a pulsating 41-38 triumph.

Wilmington cheerleaders help leukemia research

Wilmington High School's varsity and junior varsity basketball cheerleaders recently gave more than just a cheer to a cause slightly more vital than a high school team's winning or losing.

The girls raised over $400.00 for the Leukemia Research Foundation through the efforts channelled through the Give and Go competition featuring cheerleading squads from throughout Massachusetts.

Wilmington's cheerleaders spent a month raising money through bake sales, game concessions and the recent Give and Go cheering competition. Lynn English won the right to cheer at an upcoming Boston Celtics playoff game, while the Wilmington squad, coached by Frances Fay, placed a strong second.

The Wilmington cheerleaders who made the big push for a good cause are: Ann Marie DeLucia, Barbara Smith, Linda Dicey, Lisa Gidari, Cheryl Kincaid, Debbie Mottolo, Cheryl Olson, Allison Nolan, Bonnie Phillips, Cheryl Richter, Karen Steen, Ellen Tighe, Suzanne Tolini, Julie Celata, Carolyn Magee, Cheryl Ann Amato, Laurie Ausiello, Julie Cain, Michelle Carbone, Janet Leary, Julie Sanville, Lois Fitzpatrick, Kim McCabe, Kathy Stone, Elaine Walsh, Maureen Brennan and Vicki DeGaravilla. Helping to coach the team were Cindy Carbone and Nancy Miano.

Robinson completes fine season

Rich Robinson, a former star at Austin Prep, has completed a fine first season as a member of the Saint Anselms College hockey team. Although the 5'10", 160 pound freshman scored only two goals to go along with five assists, he showed a great deal of potential scoring ability. A smart, playmaking center, Robinson appeared in all 23 games for the Hawks, who finished at 8-14-1.

Head coach Tom Birmingham is very high on the Wilmington product. "Rich is the strongest skater on the club and a good hustler. I am sure that he is going to be a very strong forward for us next year," offered Birmingham.

Robinson played hockey at Austin Prep for three years under coach Brian Hayes, and was named as a First Team All-Star in the Merrimack Valley Conference his senior year. A business and economics major at St. Anselms, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Robinson of 6 Carolyn Road, Wilmington.

Wanted: Good Clean Industry

Jay Donovan thinks Wilmington needs industry as part of its limited growth policy. Industry pays taxes and creates jobs. Jay knows it takes development skills to attract responsible businesses, while also protecting the natural resources of the community, such as its water supply. That's the job Jay's running for.

A Development Professional

Jay is a professional at helping communities attract and expand industry. In Lawrence and Haverhill, he is aiding businesses secure financing that's encouraging expansion. Yet, quality of life issues, such as a clean water supply, are just as important to a community as industrial growth. Jay's clients have ranged from Harrington, Keefe and Schork, Inc. to the State of Colorado. He has also served as Deputy Director for Planning in the State's Manpower Office. Jay holds a Bachelor's Degree from Northeastern University, as well as a Master's in Management.

Roots in Wilmington

Jay has lived in Wilmington for the past 13 years, but his family history in the community goes back over 40 years. Jay recalls, as a child, visiting the small white cottage on Jones Avenue owned by his Grand Aunt, Beatrice Menadier. Another Grand Aunt, Edna Pierce, lived not far away on Middlesex Avenue. In many ways, Jay has grown up with Wilmington. Now Jay would like to help Wilmington grow in a profitable and responsible way.

Gary Steele awarded Commendation Medal

Airman First Class and Tewksbury native Gary S. Steele has been awarded an Air Force Commendation Medal for outstanding achievement. Gary distinguished himself while assigned to the 3380th Security Police Squadron based at Kessler Air Force Base, Mississippi. Gary's diligence and devotion to duty were instrumental in the resolution of many complex problems encountered during the devastation wrought by Hurricane Frederic. His distinctive accomplishments bring credit not only to himself, but to the United States Air Force, his family and his home town.

Gary has received Air Force certificates of training in law enforcement, security police tactics and effective writing. He has also received Tactical Neutralization Team training.

Gary has used his Air Force training both on and off base. He has received several letters of appreciation for his efforts. A Major General commended Gary for his effort in providing protection for the late Shah of Iran. He was also commended for outstanding contributions to his squadron's training exercise when they took on the Army's best and won. Gary's squadron successfully defended its site against the advances of a Green Beret 'A' team.

Off base Gary has been commended for his efforts during a search of a densely wooded marsh for a suspect involved in grand theft auto. He was also commended for his part in a search party which recovered a five-year-old boy who drowned in the Bay of Biloxi.

Gary has recently volunteered his services to an Emergency Service Team. The mission and importance of this 15-member team is a vast and complex one. They are a close knit, highly trained and motivated team prepared to take on high risk missions. Among the many crisis situations they have been trained to handle are: anti-sniper action, barricaded suspect neutralization and hostage rescue, counter terrorist tactics and special event missions.

Why would Gary want to volunteer for a service which is certain to put him in several dangerous situations?

The answer is simple, according to Gary. He feels it's a good opportunity for extra training. "There's more risk involved than simply being on patrol duty," comments Gary. He enjoys being part of a specialized team and Gary feels, "Specialized is putting it mildly."

Gary has recently extended his tour of duty in the Air Force for two years. On February 1, 1981 he reported to the Security Police stationed in Spangdahlem, Germany.

Gary is the son of Gerald and Joanne Steele of 9 McKenzie Circle, Tewksbury. He graduated from Tewksbury Memorial High School in June of 1978 and entered the Air Force in August of that year.

Upon completion of his Air Force duty Gary plans to become a state trooper or join a large active police force.

Wilmington crime watch

by Officer Bill Gable

Recently I have been asked "What specifically is Crime Prevention?" It sounds like an all encompassing term, but simply means education. The job of the Crime Prevention officer is to make people aware of the crimes that are being committed in their area and what the people of the community can do about it.

The United States system of law enforcement has in the past been predicated on the fact that a crime is committed, the police investigate the crime, identification of the criminal is made, evidence is gathered and the criminal is brought to trial. This method of law enforcement is known as the 'Re-active' form of law enforcement.

Crime Prevention on the other hand takes the form of 'Pro-active' law enforcement and has been patterned after the British form of law enforcement. Before the crime is committed, all attempts are made to identify crime risks and to keep crimes from being committed. Also after a crime is committed the method in which the crime took place is analyzed and all attempts are made to eliminate or reduce the circumstances which led to that crime so that others of the same type will be stopped before they occur.

The formal identification of crime prevention is: "The anticipation, recognition and the appraisal of a crime risk and the initiation of some sort of action to remove or reduce that risk."

The only way crime prevention can work is by community participation. The police need your help to reduce crime in your neighborhood. Keep your eyes and ears open and report what you see.

Wilmington senior topics

COA meeting

The April Council on Aging meeting will be held in the Drop-in Center Monday evening, April 6 beginning at seven o'clock. Many topics of interest to the elderly will be discussed. To help the Council on Aging act in the interest of all the elderly of Wilmington, it is essential to have all the seniors attend these meetings.

Any person involved in a contested political race has been invited to the April Council meeting. It is important to all before voting for a person seeking any political office to learn as much as we can about them, especially how he or she will serve the interests of the elderly. The Council has invited these persons to speak at the meeting to allow the seniors to know how they stand on elderly issues. Please make every effort to attend the meeting Monday, April 6. St. Patrick's party

The St. Patrick's Day party held at the Knights of Columbus Hall March 19 was a very enjoyable time for all in attendance. The meal of corned beef and cabbage was great. Jim Blute was terrific as usual. The Irish dancers under the direction of Barbara Walsh donated their talents to the seniors. The dancers entertained throughout the evening with several Irish jigs and Irish Folk dances. The seniors enjoyed them very much.

The McDonald's birthday party for March had to be cancelled due to illness of Lorraine Rossingnal, McDonald's representative who delivers the birthday cakes to the center. The March party will be held Friday, April 3 at 2 p.m.

Business Manager

Burlington resident seeks Spanish Gold

Skies were clear during search for Atocha treasure

By PETER KENT

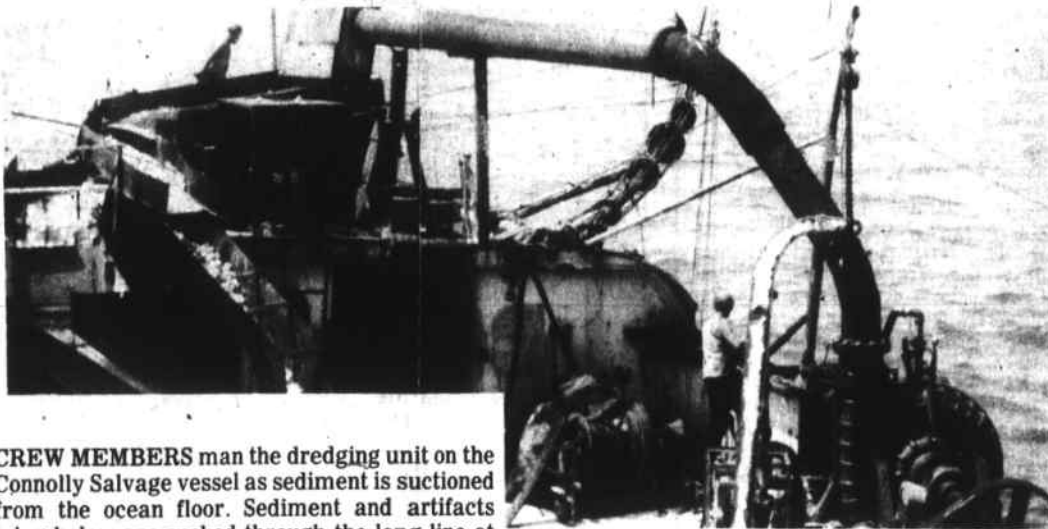

"The annual stockholders meeting was held Jan. 3, 1981 at the home of James Romano, Connolly Salvage, Treasurer, in Herndon, Virginia. The stockholders voted to continue operating for another year and to raise funds by selling limited partnerships. A Maryland lawyer was contacted and the agreements were drawn up...."

A typical stockholders report? So it would seem by the opening sentences of the newsletter. That is, until one reaches the final sentence of that first paragraph: "This agreement covers the Atocha treasure only."

Atocha? Treasure?

The skies were clear, the winds "agreeable". A fine day for sailing, or so thought the commander of a 28-ship fleet leaving Havana, Cuba on that September day in 1622. His mission: Lead the ships to the homeland, Spain. His cargo: a fortune in gold, silver, copper and other valuable commodities reaped from Spain's colonial empire.

Of the fleet, the names Nuestra Senora de Atocha and Santa Margarita ring most familiar in the ears of historians and treasure-seekers, for on the ships bearing those names lay the bulk of the Spanish treasure being transported. And on the ocean floor off the Florida Keys today lies the bulk of the Atocha cargo: 160 gold bars,

CREW MEMBERS man the dredging unit on the Connolly Salvage vessel as sediment is suctioned from the ocean floor. Sediment and artifacts lying below are sucked through the long line at right, the sifting unit at left shakes off sand and other sediment, and, with luck, gold and silver coins, cannon balls and other treasures are bared. This photo was taken during the expedition last summer. The same equipment will be used again this year.

900 silver bars, 250,000 silver coins.

For the Atocha, the Santa Margarita and several other ships in that Spanish fleet never reached their destination. The day after departing from Havana, the fleet sailed into the teeth of a hurricane. The results were disastrous.

The Atocha and its cargo sank to the bottom of the ocean. The Santa Margarita, carrying a load of treasure about half that aboard the Atocha, also was shipwrecked.

A Spanish salvage mission launched soon after resulted in the discovery of the Santa Margarita and the recovery of some of its precious cargo. The Atocha (named for the blessed shrine in Madrid, Our Lady of Atocha), however, was never found.

But, in 1966, renowned treasure-hunter

Mel Fisher decided to tackle what others had tried and failed to do before. Locate the Atocha and the estimated $200-$400 million in treasure sitting aboard her.

Fisher never found the 600-ton Spanish Galleon, as more than 350 years has passed since the Atocha plunged shattered to the ocean floor. Time has washed the Atocha away, but memories of the ship and its treasure never faded. Presumably, the treasure itself still exists, as Fisher found portions of the cache during his dredging efforts.

This tale may sound familiar to some, for indeed, it has been told here before. That was just over six months ago, shortly after a Tewksbury man, Peter Pappas, returned from the Florida Keys with a satchel of artifacts and treasures found near the site of the sinking and plans to return to the sea in search of more of the Spanish bounty.

Television has a way of stimulating interest, of educating, of planting dreams in the minds of its viewers. All this is true in the case of Peter Pappas, co-owner of Town Line Plumbing in Woburn (the city in which he was born and raised).

It was early fall in 1979 when Pappas sat in his home, flicked on the TV set and began watching a program detailing the treasure-hunting efforts of Mel Fisher. The program revealed Fisher's success in locating the Santa Margarita — from which, despite a Spanish salvage mission some 350 years before, he had claimed from the sea about $60 million in treasure — and his unsuccessful attempts to find the main horde of the Atocha treasure.

For most of us, such a program would elicit thoughts of how we would spend a

Finding "friends" not so easy

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the third part of his Russia Chronicles, Middlesex East correspondent Rick Pearl reports on the professional seminars conducted in the Soviet Union between members of the Visual Arts International group and their Russian counterparts. In Part One, Pearl reviewed the difficulty his group had in entering the country, and in Part Two, he told of a secret liaison between a member of the V.I.A. tour and a Ukrainian family.

By RICK PEARL

Third in a series

Part of the itinerary of our two-week tour study of the Soviet Union were four scheduled meetings with Soviet journalists, lawyers, artists, and professors in each of the four cities we were to visit. Only two of these "friendship meetings" ever materialized, however, for reasons that were never satisfactorily explained to us.

The two sit-downs we did have with our Russian counterparts were quite interesting, however, as not only did we meet them face-to-face over a discussion table, but socialized with them afterwards over vodka and hors d'oeuvres. The formal meetings tended to be a bit starchy and unproductive, but the less inhibited social hours proved a fascinating experience. In groups of three or four, or sometimes one-on-one, the discussion tended to be more animated and informative.

Even still, the general impression our group had after these two encounters was that we were being preached a "party line" at all times, with certain courtesy deferences to our way of life that may or may not have been planned ahead of time.

At the round table most of the answers to our questions could have been predicted, but even still, it was fascinating to actually hear, first-hand, the line of thinking that is taught in this country. You can read so many books, see so many films and documentaries, but until you've heard a real Soviet party member preach his doctrine, you miss the real flavor of it. They know all the tricks in avoiding the real meat of a question, while still making it sound like they've answered you.

Our first encounter was in Kiev, at the Ukrainian Friendship Society, which is housed in an impressive structure situated behind iron gates in the southeast section of town just up the road from Dynamo Stadium, where

inspection surprised

Late the other morning while on my way into the kitchen I heard what sounded like a police radio coming from out in front of my house. I didn't think much of it; I live on Main Street, so it's not uncommon to see a police cruiser pull over a speeder there. But curiosity made me pull back the living room curtain far enough to get a look at what was going on. I discovered that a white Registry of Motor Vehicles cruiser had stopped right in front of my house. A uniformed officer was standing in front of the cruiser, with one foot up on the bumper and his elbow leaning on his knee. He appeared to be waiting for something to happen, but there was no indication of what, even when I struggled to listen to the squawks that emanated from the radio inside the car.

I continued to watch for several minutes. Suddenly, a brown jeep, which didn't appear to be speeding, approached the cruiser. The officer lumbered his hulking frame from its position in front of the car into the road a few feet and waved the jeep to a halt. The officer sauntered over to the driver's side window and proceeded to talk to the jeep's young operator. I wasn't able to hear what the officer was saying to him, but I suspected that it was probably the

One man's story

By DAN FERULLO
PART I

I'm walking the line,
I'm walking the line
Treading thin ice time after time.

I go for the best, end up with much less
I need the real thing, forget all the rest

Started out good, working out bad
All the sweet love turned sour and sad
From "Cold Love"
sung by Donna Summer

This is a real life "Kramer vs. Kramer" story. It is the story of John Domenic Costello (as I shall call him), about his divorce, and about the hardships he is facing because of what he describes as "the unfairness of the legal system in the state of Massachusetts." An unfair legal system that is making it very difficult for him to salvage his pride and respect from a doomed marriage and to have a reasonable chance to see the four children he helped to bring into the world. An unfair legal system that is making it impossible for him to bear all the financial hardships he is bearing. True, it is a one-sided story, much in the way "Kramer vs. Kramer" was. It is told from just the man's point of view. But in John Costello's opinion, it is a point of view that has been long overdue. There are husbands and fathers being unfairly treated by the courts every day, he says. Wives and mothers are being "put up on pedestals" and given every opportunity to present their side of the story. But as far as John Costello is concerned, that's been where the story has ended for most of the men. Now he wants a chance to tell the other side of the story.

The shadowy epilogue to John's story is evident whenever another married guy asks him how he feels about divorce. John tells him, don't bother, it's not worth going through all the trouble and heartaches. If there's one message John would like to get across to a married man who is contemplating getting a divorce, it is men have rights, too. It is that message he is sending in this story. But before one can begin to digest and understand the plight of John Costello, one should know a little about the man himself and the circumstances that have led up to the trying series of events that have crippled him emotionally and financially. He is not a Hollywood character and telling you about John isn't easy, since it has been only recently that even John has come to know who John is. This enlightenment came after he sought professional help following a severe depression that set in during his marital breakdown.

It is best if he tells how it happened: "I went to a psychiatrist regularly for over a year, and what we found out is basically I was very timid when I got married. I was looking for a 'mother image.' I never got much guidance when I grew up. I had nine brothers and sisters. My father always worked — he was a very hard working man. My mother was a very hard working woman. There was really no time for them to give any one special consideration."

That timid guy met that "mother image," and he married her. He says, "She's a very strong woman, very dominant, and she took me in like a mother. Well, as I started doing better, as I started working hard, as I developed a business and started making money, I developed more self-worth. I no longer needed this mother image, and I started trying to break away from it. Because she is such a dominant woman, she wasn't going to change. You basically can't change people, so eventually we started separating in our ways, in our thinking."

Stamps support survivors

Don't panic if you discover a great white shark in your mailbox this spring. It won't mean that "Jaws" has found a new home, but that the National Wildlife Federation has issued its 1981 conservation stamps.

This year's sheet of stamps depicts 36 different animal species, all of which are "wildlife survivors." From the leopard frog to the big brown bear, all these animals have special abilities and traits which help them survive in the wild.

NWF's stamps, familiar to millions of Americans since their first appearance in 1938, are frequently used to decorate letters and packages. In addition, they may be collected in stamp albums available from the Federation. Each album contains descriptions and biological data on the 36 species of mammals, birds, fish, insects and plants depicted on the 1981 stamp sheets.

NWF, the nation's largest nonprofit conservation organization, began its stamp program 43 years ago during its third year of operation to raise the funds necessary for its survival. NWF's first president, Jay Norwood (Ding) Darling, painted the first 16 stamps himself. President Franklin D. Roosevelt became the first collector of conservation stamps when he received the brand new sheet of stamps at the White House on March 20, 1938.

Since then NWF has distributed more than seven billion stamps to wildlife enthusiasts and stamp collectors across the country. The colorful, educational stamps are reproduced in full-color miniature from the paintings of such well-known wildlife artists as Chuck Ripper, Maynard Reece, Arthur Singer, and Dan Eckleberry.

Contributions for stamps are used to help fund NWF's conservation education program, which last year distributed over 1.4 million free books and pamphlets on environmental and wildlife subjects. Donations are also used to acquire and protect wildlife habitat. Among the wildlife survivors pictured on the

Retired Men's Club

Eye surgery, cataracts examined

The Retired Men's Club of Wakefield held a semi-monthly meeting, Wednesday, March 11, at the First Parish Congregational Church of Wakefield.

Richard Taylor, 1st Vice President introduced Robert Sproul who introduced the speaker, Dr. Peter B. Mooney from Melrose, an ophthalmologist who is on the active staff at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital. He obtained a Medical Science Degree from Dartmouth Medical School in Hanover, N.H., and his M.D. degree from Harvard Medical School. He completed a four year residency at the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary after an internship at the University of Kentucky. He is honored as a diplomate of the American Academy of Ophthalmology. Mr. Sproul mentioned Dr. Mooney's unusual abilities and his background in medical science, eye muscle surgery, cataract surgery and intraocular lens implant surgery.

In his opening remarks, Dr. Mooney mentioned that he operated on his first cataract patient twelve years ago at the Mass. Eye and Ear Infirmary. Since then there has been a revolution in cataract surgery involving a difference in technique and greater ease in the rehabilitation of the patient visually. Dr. Mooney has had over 700 patients for cataract surgery.

Dr. Mooney showed a short audio-visual film explaining the surgery and the visual rehabilitation of the patient with cataracts. The stay in the hospital is much shorter. Substitute lenses are possible such as contact lenses, intraocular contact lens. Eye diseases also influence whether there will be implants for example, diabetes, eye diseases, or glaucoma. If one has a problem at home one should always contact one's eye doctor.

Dr. Mooney after the film presentation explained how cataract glasses, contact lenses and intraocular lenses were used to correct vision of patients who had cataracts removed. The advantages and disadvantages as well as the indication and contra-indication of each method of visual correction were discussed.

At the end of Dr. Mooney's most pertinent subject, Robert Sproul thanked him for his important revelations on cataract operations and improvements and opened the meeting up for questions. There were many questions from concerned members on the subject of "cataracts" and operations which underlined the importance of this problem with senior citizens. Dr. Mooney's talk and film were most appreciated as indicated by the attendance and the applause.

Preceding Dr. Mooney's presentation on the subject of "Cataracts" was the regular hospitality hour and the "business" meeting chaired by President George Flewelling of Lynnfield. He announced that there were 324 members present, second highest attendance of 12 visitors who will become members. They were introduced by President Flewelling and came from surrounding towns as follows: Elmer Carlson, Oscar E. Larsen, and James M. Nauss of Wakefield; James A. Cronin of Middleton; Donald E. Ewing and Robert A. Morris of Stoneham; Wilfred A. Holland of Reading; and Francis N. Ham of North Reading, and Harold T. Regan of Wakefield.

Names of new men eligible for membership were announced and were welcomed to the Men's Club. Not all were present but there were eight members noted as follows who were eligible for membership being present for two meetings: John F. Cochrane and John Butler of Wakefield; William V. Driscoll, Harry H. Hartt and Emmanuel Mello of Reading; William Lans of Melrose; Philip LaNormandin of Everett; Harry Scott of Woburn.

Thomas Coughlan of Melrose, 2nd Vice-President presented the names of members having birthdays since the last meeting and the eight members present were saluted by the usual "Happy Birthday" song led by Bob Sproul.

Joseph Whiting, Chairman of the Sick and Visiting Committee, read the names of members in hospitals and recuperating at home. "Get Well" cards have been sent to most of these members.

Gus Seavey drew the door prize which was won by Bradford Waterman of Wakefield, a silver dollar in a beautiful enclosure. Story-teller Harry C. O'Brien related some Irish jokes in honor of St. Patrick's Day and Roger Callahan played some old songs on his harmonica, including "Somewhere My Love".

Bob Francis was recognized for his efforts in keeping up a birthday list of members, and also for his devotion in collecting Campbell's Soup labels for the benefit of the Beverly School for the Deaf.

Chester Card, band leader, reported on band activities. The band will play for the Retired Men's Club on April 8th. This year will be the eighth year of the band's existence. There is an average of 24 members playing and rehearsing from many communities, with more who can be called on. Over 80 players have assisted in these eight years. Some members have moved away, some have "passed on" and some of these unfilled instrument players' positions are difficult to replace. There have been former symphony players, opera men and even some that have their own jazz players. Mr. Card also mentioned that we are still looking for a bass player and would welcome any other instrumental players. The band practices every Monday morning at the First Parish Congregational Church.

Paul Richmond with is thought for the day, read a poem "The House by the Side of the Road" by Sam Walter Foss which was thoroughly appreciated by the audience.

Henry Murphy reminded the group that Wednesday, April 22nd will include a Men's Club Breakfast for which reser-

A reader writes in

Will the real Mr. Kennedy stand up?

To the Editor:

Have you ever read a review of a play that you have just seen and wondered if the reviewer knew about what he was writing?

That's the way I felt as I read "Dan Kennedy's" review of "On Golden Pond." I usually do not take much stock in reviews in weekly newspapers because most of the time the review is done by someone without the basic foundation of a course in Drama I.

However, "Mr. Kennedy's" review cannot be ignored because it is obviously written by someone with total ignorance of literature or by someone with an ulterior motive or both.

I have no criticism of someone who says that he did not like an actor's performance on a particular night, that happens to the best of them.

Mr. Kennedy however has the audacity to attack the script - which won a Broadway Drama Guild's Award for best play and obviously Mr. Kennedy's tastes are more suited to reviewing the three Stooges or Hogan's Heroes; he obviously does not have the talent or compassion to fully comprehend the emotions in "On Golden Pond."

His comment that he does not know if the play is a serious play or a comedy is a sad commentary on his "profession." What are Mr. Kennedy's qualifications to write reviews? In fact is there a Mr. Kennedy or was the review written by some copy boy?

Elliot Norton and Kevin Kelley, two highly respected Boston Drama Critics, have given On Golden Pond rave reviews. Henry Fonda has recently completed filming the story. That alone should settle the question of the script's merit. Being generous to "Mr. Kennedy," perhaps the second alternative is true. Did Mr. Kennedy have an ulterior motive in writing this piece?

I am not a Woburn native, nor am I involved in its politics, but the review appears to be an attempt to create an air of negativism toward one of the producers of the play, a Woburn native and a member of the Massachusetts Legislature. If this be the true reason for the review then it belongs on the editorial page with an appropriate heading. But surely not under the guise of drama review. I say shame, shame! Let's keep politics and drama separated.

If "Mr. Kennedy's" only way to cast negativism on Woburn's Representative is through his production of a play, at least wait until he produces a bad play - do not attempt to do it on a solid gold hit like "On Golden Pond." When "Mr. Kennedy" tries to do so his motives become obvious.

Perhaps this situation is what caused the Bard of Avon to once write "Me thinks something is rotten in the State of Denmark." I think something is rotten but it is much closer to us than the State of Denmark.

Very truly yours,

Touring the Soviet Union

some of the Olympic soccer matches were held this past summer).

We were led into a small foyer, hung our coats on a rack in a side hallway, and walked among a photographic display in an exhibition area. After a few minutes of waiting, we were ushered into a medium-sized conference room, with a long table dominating in the center. At the end of the table, at the head of the room, was another, shorter table, where the heads of both our group and the Ukrainian Friendship Society sat. Arranged around the room were several other chairs to accommodate any overflow.

There was a small, glass-enclosed book case on the far wall, in which several interesting pamphlets and books were left for our perusal. Among the catchier titles was one published by the Novosti Press Agency, "The Truth About Afghanistan." It is a 158-page green booklet, complete with 16 pages of photos. Some of the captions were particularly amusing. Beneath a photo of then-National Security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski of the USA, who is looking down the gun sights of a rifle, is the caption "Zbigniew Brzezinski, during a visit to Pakistani troops positioned near the Khyber Pass, casts a malignant glance at Afghan territory through the site of a Chinese-made light machine gun." A malignant glance? That was good for a few laughs, along with the not-so-hidden inference that the Americans and Chinese were joining forces against Russia. It was propaganda at its best.

All of these books, along with some colorful magazines featuring life in the Ukraine, were made available to us.

Before our meeting started we were shown a documentary film on Kiev. As documentaries go, it was a good piece of work.

Next came the introductions. An interpreter introduced each of the distinguished members of the Friendship Society present. There was the head of the medical branch of Kiev, the head of the law association, the secretary of the union of artists, the executive secretary of the Ukrainian union of artists, the senior resident expert master of law and sciences, the president of the local media - Oleg Arsinko - and other news correspondents. We were then introduced.

David Briggs, of the New Haven Register then made opening remarks for our group. They concerned the strained relations between our two countries, and that despite our differences, we must learn to love and respect one another.

The remarks by Briggs's Soviet counterpart were along the same lines. Then came our first question in the open forum situation. Realizing that the rest of us were probably a little unsure of how to proceed, Briggs opened the questioning by asking under what circumstances would the Soviet government go into Poland and what would Western intervention mean to detente?

"We have a very clear position on the Poland situation," said the law professor, who did most of the speaking for the Ukrainian delegation. "We think the Polish people can solve their problems on their own. We will prevent any intervention from outside, and on the other hand, will extend all financial and material aid to the Polish people. We hope no one takes advantage of the situation in Poland in order to aggravate the relations between our two countries. In the present-day situation, we are sure that the vital interests of the Polish people are represented by the Polish Worker's Society."

Party rhetoric

And so on. Many of our questions were avoided, some were scoffed at, and generally, our guests remained inflexible in their party rhetoric.

It was only later, at a reception back at our hotel, that they told us how impressed they were with our country on their last visit, and otherwise toned down their staunch devotion. Consequently, the reception was a much more pleasant experience, as many of us (in our first official capacity as representatives of the American Way of Life) were more than a little out of our league at the stiff, formal discussions.

Our meeting in Tbilisi, the capital of Soviet Georgia, scheduled during the New Year holiday week, was cancelled. We were more fortunate in Leningrad, where our January 7 meeting was held as planned.

The Leningrad facility was a more impressive building than that in Kiev (as we will discuss later, Leningrad, as a whole, was the most impressive city in our journey), with a great marble staircase leading upstairs to several conference rooms.

We were shown around the place by the secretary of the Leningrad Friendship Society, and some of the rooms were luxuriously furnished. The Russians pride themselves nowadays on the refurbishing of old palaces and museums, and it was quite apparent that they had done their work well on this edifice.

We were also told the purpose of these "friendship societies," which are dotted all over the Soviet Union. They are to "promote better relations" between the countries of the world. They are unofficial bodies which are subsidized by dues from members, not by the state. They send and receive delegations from other countries, and exchange information and ideas.

Our meeting in Leningrad was a bit more organized than the one in Kiev. We were broken up into separate discussion groups, with the journalists talking with one another about politics and the press, lawyers talking about the differences in the two countries' legal systems, and religious leaders discussing their policies.

The exchange of ideas was a bit more rapid, as our group had obviously benefited from their experience in the first meeting in Kiev. Once again, however, the social hour afterwards proved a great deal more interesting and productive.

One group, in particular, spent quite a bit of time talking with a Soviet journalist by the name of Sergei Neushev. He was a young man in his late-20's who worked for the Novosti Press Agency as a magazine writer. He specialized in areas concerning the environment, and related how he got paid a set salary plus a certain stipend for stories that are selected for print, his working conditions, and some of the stories he had worked on in the past year. These informal meetings tended to be much warmer and gave more of an insight into the way of life in the Soviet Union. In the formal meetings, policies, not people, were the main topic.

The combination of the two forms of cultural exchanges - formal meeting, informal get-together - proved to balance out well. In general our group tended to enjoy the social aspect a great deal more, but, then again, we were clearly at a disadvantage in talking policy with our hosts. In America, each man is free to have his own philosophy, and therefore there is no set way to defend what your government is doing. In Russia you are told what to say, and there is little difficulty in defending your country's policies.

NEXT WEEK: The Russian theater and arts is a new experience for the Westerner. In Part Four, the various aspects of the Soviet Union's cultural base is examined.

Divorce: One man's story

Prior to that I never necessarily agreed with her; I just sort of gave in to her."

During the time that John was creating his own self-worth - during the time he'd worked hard to build his own business, which was plumbing contracting, he and his wife, Elaine, had four children. When the business picked up momentum, and after the last child was born, John began to recognize that he could stand on his own two feet and that he didn't have to rely on the strength of his wife to get by in life. "After about seven years, all of a sudden, started these changes," he reveals. "I started feeling better about myself. I started voicing my opinion a little bit more. Getting a lot of static, but feeling better about myself. Feeling better, but not necessarily doing anything about it. Then about the eleventh year of our marriage, I decided I wanted a separation."

It was not going to be that simple. As things worsened in their personal life, Elaine had also extended her dominance into John's business. John wanted things to be different there, too. He adds, "I had come to a point where I had incorporated my business, and I told her I just didn't want her to have anything to do with it. I felt dominated constantly. Suffocated. I just wanted to be me."

The more John tried to be himself, the more Elaine tightened her grip. John pieced together the nadir of her possessiveness, when he encountered several of their female neighbors on various occasions. "The women told me that they were told by my wife, 'Keep your hands off him.' I mean, they hadn't even met me yet, and they were told to keep their hands off me! This is what the female neighbors told me that my wife told them. I couldn't believe it!"

John felt torn emotionally: on one hand, he was experiencing a sense of self-worth and pride from business accomplishments, and on the other, he was distraught over his inability to deal with his wife, who was seemingly unwilling to try to deal with him, too, even after repeated attempts at compromise. Moreover, he was ambivalent over the other aspects of his and Elaine's union, particularly the most important. He explains, "I loved my children. I loved my lifestyle. I had a beautiful home. My home was worth in the area of a hundred and ten thousand dollars. I was living in Burlington in a beautiful fifty-four by thirty split entry. When I tell you I had quality in it - all the plumbing was done by myself, in copper; all the heating system was a four zone heating system; cast iron baseboards; heated two car garage. I had plaster walls, not sheetrock. Anderson windows. I mean, I had everything the best that I could think of. I had a steam bath, the fanciest toilets."

Notwithstanding all these pluses, John was still unable to work out the problems he was having with Elaine. He describes how he felt and what he eventually did about it: "I was unhappy. I didn't understand why I was unhappy. I left the house twice and came back. I couldn't take it. When it all got so much that I felt that I was really losing my mind, I left and I lived in a cellar in my shop in Stoneham. I stayed there."

It was during that third separation that he made up his mind that the marriage was over. At the time, though, he didn't want to go see a lawyer. His first reaction was that that route would be too cold, too severe, emotionally, especially on the children. "I didn't want to do things that way," he recalls. "I felt bad about it. I felt it's going to be a lot of pain, but I just couldn't live with things the way they were." He'd spoken to his wife many times about leaving for good, but then came the day when he had to tell the children. "I told them, 'Mommy and daddy aren't happy, and for your sake and everyone involved, I think it's best if we don't live together,'" he went on. "The children seemed to take it pretty good. They were sad about it, but they understood that maybe it would be better if we separated."

John packed his bags. "It took one wardrobe - a man's wardrobe," he continues. "I took a valet, which I've had for many years, some toilet articles, and that's all." When the time came for him to actually leave the house, he made arrangements for the children to be out, so they wouldn't have to see their father walk away. He relates, "They went on a vacation to Maine for a week. I told them that when they came home I would be out of the house. I didn't think it was a good idea to do it in front of the kids. Then they came back. That very night I called the kids up to reassure them that daddy had left the house but as not left them. I just simply will not live in the same house. I will do everything I can to support them, and there is no need for any change, other than the fact that I am simply not living in the house."

John wasn't gone long before complications, which were related to his wife's involvement in his business, set in.

"Elaine called me up, and said she wanted her week's salary. Well, she was my secretary. That was part of her dominance. She controlled everything in the office. I knew nothing. I never even signed a check in thirteen years. Thirteen years! And if I even brought the subject up, she became furious. Furious! Even if I asked her what the balance was, I earned that was mine. I wanted her to know what it felt like to be robbed."

Looking back at what he did, John feels that he was wrong to have reacted so emotionally, but he says that he was provoked into taking the possessions that were his exclusively or that he knew his wife would miss. However, he didn't touch his children's possessions. When Elaine the money, but if I mentioned it, she became furious. I don't have the time, don't bother me, and stuff of that nature she'd say." In an effort to soften hard feelings over financial control of the business, John offered a compromise. "To get back to what I started to say," he continues, "I said to her, 'Look, if you're willing to come down and do the payroll for the rest of the men - because I haven't found anyone yet, you can take your regular salary. Take the whole thing, I don't need any money. I live in the cellar, and it's already paid for.'"

John's attempt at a compromise backfired

John's attempt at a compromise backfired, as he explains here: "She came down. She made out a regular check made payable to herself, and put it in a pile with all the rest of the payroll checks. Then she said to me, 'Sign all of these checks.' So I signed all the checks, then I left that day to go to work. A week later, my brother, George, who's a bookkeeping teacher and whom I'd asked to look over my books for me, came in, and said, 'John, who made out this two thousand dollar check to Elaine?' 'I didn't make out a two thousand dollar check,' I told him. 'Well, look,' he said, and showed me the books. 'Someone liquidated your payroll account. You had two thousand dollars in here for quarterly taxes. They're due now,' he said. I said, 'Let me take a look at that.' Elaine had made out a check for two thousand dollars! Then she took my regular account, which had a balance of about four hundred dollars, and made out another check and liquidated that account. She took all the money that was left in the two accounts! I was furious! Are you kidding, I said to myself? I'm about as honest as a person can conceivably be in this society. I couldn't believe that she'd do that to me. I called her up. The line was busy. I called again. The line was still busy. You know, I was nervous at that time, because I was just making ends meet. I called a third time. There was no answer. I said to myself, she's out in the yard."

By this time, John was at it with his end. He jumped into his truck and sped over to the house. He tells what happened when he arrived: "I went to open the door. The door was locked. My keys don't work! It's my home! It's my home! All my equipment was in there, along with everything else. I went around to the back and took the least important window, which was a small pane to the back door of the garage, and I broke it. I got myself in, and I started loading up all my equipment. I was very, very angry. At that point, I was getting nasty. I took pictures. I took everything discovered what John had done, she reacted just as emotionally, and she proceeded with the first of what would become a long series of legal entanglements. John explains, "She went to court to get a restraining order against me." When John appeared before the judge, he found out that breaking and entry wasn't the only charge she'd brought up. "She said I beat her physically!" he exclaims, adding that when he tried to tell the judge the truth, he was ordered to "shut up." "I will not shut up," I said. "It's not true. You're not going to make a wife beater out of me."

John appeared in court that day with an attorney, who cautioned John to refrain from further outbursts, indicating that "all judges say that," and that it was "standard procedure." John wouldn't accept that. To make matters worse, the judge issued the restraining order against John. "I couldn't believe it!" he says.

A short time later, Elaine got even with John. He recalls, "She broke into my office and took all kinds of stuff. She took all of my papers. Then she threatened me. She said she was going to report me to the IRS. She'd confiscated all of my books and ledgers, anything she could get her hands on. Fortunately, my brother had my checkbook, because I had asked him to take it home and work on it."

John suspected all along that Elaine had broken into his shop, but it wasn't until he'd spoken to one of his children over the telephone that his suspicions were confirmed. The youngest told him that Elaine had come home late one night with a carload of boxes filled with business materials. When John went to his lawyer to file a complaint with the police, his lawyer advised against it. He said that, chances were, the complaint would never reach court, and even if it did, chances were, the judge would favor Elaine. Frustratingly, John says of his lawyer's advice: "Oh, no, you can't be a bad boy. Don't accuse women, because you're wasting your time. And that's a fact."

John was back in court soon after, though: Elaine was making an attempt to get some financial support. As the time before, Elaine unloaded a second surprise: she claimed that John was irresponsible and unable to properly manage their property, which included rental property attached to John's business and an apartment house. Again the judge decided in Elaine's favor. "He wanted me to pay fortune in treasure, of sailing the seas. But not for Peter Pappas. With two brothers-in-law in the dredging and salvaging business, he had the opportunity to make his dreams come true.

Tom and John Connolly shared the dreams of their brother-in-law, possessed the know-how to tackle such a dream, to put thoughts into action. The three men, as officers of Connolly Salvage, decided to trek to Florida in October 1979 to meet Mel Fisher and discuss his fantastic expeditions.

The foursome gathered in Key West. The men of Connolly Salvage put forth their ideas, their proposals. Fisher agreed, and for 95 percent of any take he set the trip up with a salvage ship and positioned them on the ocean above the site of the Santa Margarita and, presumably, the Atocha.

With the salvage ship and the agreement with Fisher secured, Pappas and the Connollys set about rigging the ship with a dredging system different from that employed by Fisher. True, they reasoned, Fisher had been successful with a method which involved "blowing" sand and other sea-floor materials away from the site of the wrecks in order to send divers down to search for treasure, but, like Ford Motor Company, they felt they had a better idea.

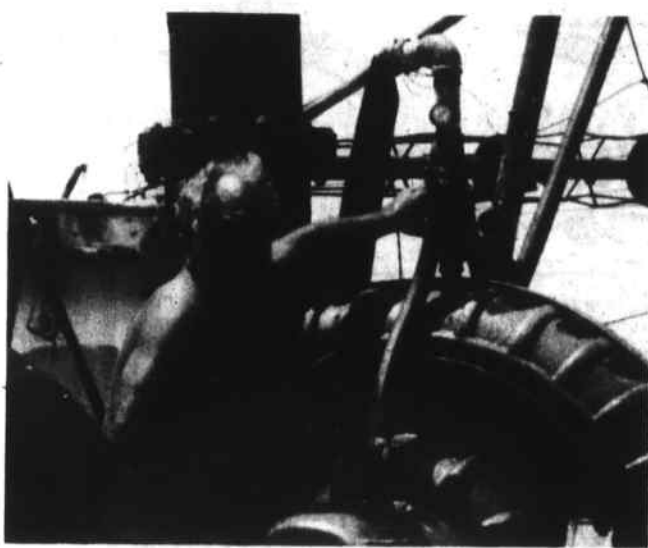

The trio spent all last summer in Florida constructing a dredging system aboard the salvage ship which employed suction. Pipes reaching deep into the water serve to suck sand and other sediment from the ocean floor, and sifting device aboard the ship would uncover any treasure sucked through the pipes. Divers hired by Connolly Salvage would then go below to search craters created by the suction device, in hopes of finding more of the Spanish cache.

The system was put into operation last August; by November the treasure-hunters had collected, according to Pappas, close to $175,000 in artifacts. Included in the take were two gold coins, 135 silver coins, 11 musket balls, five cannon balls, a pewter plate, and assorted other items.

The brief dredging effort conducted last year proved successful and served to consume Pappas and his colleagues with a desire to continue the hunt this year.

And the hunt will go on. "Not a bad take," he said of last year's find. "But this year we're going to have eight or nine months pumping time — that's not bad. We can cover the whole area this year," Pappas continued, explaining that this year there will be ample time not only for continued search of treasure from the Santa Margarita, but also for the Atocha cache.

"It's just unbelievable, the stuff that's down there. Where we're searching, they call it the Bank of Spain," Pappas said.

And, he added, he feels that this may be the year, that Connolly Salvage may be the one, to find the Atocha treasure.

"I feel so strongly this year. I feel real strong. We're going to move from where everybody else has been searching, where it's muddy. You've got to search the area."

Treasure-hunting! Spanish galleons! Gold! "It's just a thrilling experience," Pappas said. "A plumber one day and hunting for treasure the next. It's really, really something."

He then poses THE question.

"Treasure-hunting? How many people in the United States can do something like this?"

The answer, unfortunately, is not many. But the experiences of Peter Pappas and his Connolly Salvage colleagues provides fodder for dreamers.

"It's a way to have a good time and make some money," he understates. "Going away all summer and hunting for treasure isn't a bad deal."

Not a bad deal at all.

Scoliosis

Clinic opens

To provide screening and therapy for scoliosis, a term covering a range of spinal-curvature conditions, New England Memorial Hospital will open a scoliosis clinic on Friday afternoons from 2 to 4 p.m., announces Elinor Donovan, chief of physical therapy at the Stoneham hospital.

Scoliosis, which occurs more often in girls and women, can best be treated if detected at an early age, according to Cathy Hall, physical therapist. Hall, with an orthopedic surgeon, will conduct the Friday clinics.

New England Memorial has provided screening services to Stoneham schools in conjunction with the Stoneham Board of Health, and in Saugus schools.

three hundred and fifty dollars a week! I wasn't earning three hundred and fifty dollars! My money came from income property, plus a small salary. Then between the two of them I had enough to live in that home. Not only that, my mortgage was very low, because I bought that house for forty thousand dollars, and I did most of the work myself, with inventory I already had in stock, such as my baseboards, my piping and my fittings. Then he gave her control of all my property. I said, 'I'm the man, I'm supposed to be earning a living, and how can I earn a living, if she's got all the control?'"

When John tried to present his side of the story to the judge, he was treated with the same abruptness he'd been given during his first appearance in court. Says John, "He said, 'Shut up. I don't like you. You're in trouble as it is, now you keep your mouth shut.' Just like that."

John remained concerned about the rental property, especially the Stoneham building that housed his business and living quarters. Three months passed; he decided he'd better check with the bank to make sure that Elaine was making the mortgage payments regularly. He was shocked to learn that Elaine hadn't made a single payment on the Stoneham building since the judge gave her control of all the property.

"At that time I had a piece of commercial property on Montvale Avenue, right across the street from the car wash, next to the cemetery," he says. "It was also my residence. At that time I was living in one of the apartments, which someone had moved out of. The rent was only sixty-five dollars a week. I had to take the sixty-five dollars a week, by the way, out of my own pocket. And my business was located in the basement. So she knew the way the probate court worked; they would always let you keep your business, because they want you to make more money. They don't want to support your family, so they make sure you have money coming in. So therefore, that's the piece of property she deliberately did not make any payments on."

usual dialog that takes place when a policeman stops one for a motor vehicle violation.

Presently a blue Nova pulled up and parked behind the jeep and in front of the cruiser, and another Registry officer joined the first guy, who was still talking with the driver of the jeep. Shortly afterwards, without any to-do, the jeep drove away and the first officer returned to his position in front of the cruiser and his partner stood next to him with his hands in his coat pockets and his feet spread a couple of feet apart. Together they watched the traffic go by like two pigeons perched on an overhead telephone wire.

No more than five minutes went by before they waved another vehicle to the side of the road. If these guys were stopping cars for speeding, I was damned if I could figure out how they knew whom to pick out of the clutch of cars that slowed to a near crawl when their drivers spotted the officers. It looked to me as if everybody was obeying the speed limit, even if they didn't want to, since they were being coerced into traveling in what could have been best described as "a pack." Perhaps there was yet a third RMV vehicle parked further up Main Street, and the officer in that car was watching for speeders, then radioing ahead to these fellows, who would nab the violators unsuspectingly.

I finally began to piece together what these officers were doing in front of my house: it became apparent when they pulled over a third vehicle, which was an old Pontiac Grand Prix that was badly in need of a new muffler. The officers were looking for either vehicles that were unfit for being on the road or vehicles that were in need of some kind of safety repairs, say a broken tail light or bald tires. One of the officers checked the license and registration of the driver of the Grand Prix, and then wrote him up for not having a proper muffler.

Shortly after that, things got a little hectic: at one point the officers had pulled over a huge trailer truck, a pick-up truck, and two cars. That doesn't include the lady who pulled over for directions. Needless to say, the part of Main Street in front of my house got pretty congested. The thought crossed my mind that that in itself could have become a safety hazard, especially since there's a dangerous curve in the road just a few feet away from where the officers had positioned themselves. The most surprising vehicle to be pulled over, vigorously inspected and cited for failure to meet proper safety standards was a school bus. The two officers meticulously checked the bus's emergency back door, its tires, its horn, its lights and its brakes before deciding that one or more of those things were in need of repair before they possibly contributed to an accident that might involve school-aged passengers. The officers remained on duty in front of my house for practically the entire work day, except for an hour or so that must've been spent at lunch.

Their presence there was quite unlike anything I've ever seen before, other than the one or two days of surprise inspections that inevitably come right after spring and fall inspection times. I wondered why they were suddenly cropping up now, at least a month before the end of the spring inspection period. Then I remembered what a policeman-friend told me a few weeks ago.

He said, "Watch out, because the police are going to be stopping more cars for speeding than ever. And there'll be less warnings and more citations handed out."

I asked him what it was all about, and it was his opinion that "they need to make up for some of that lost prop two and a half revenue somehow. One way will be to issue more speeding tickets. That means more fines, and that means more money for the state and cities and towns."

This officer told me that his superiors have actually ordered him and his fellow officers to "nail everybody you can." So why wouldn't the Registry of Motor Vehicles want to do the same? When I called the Registry, I was told that that wasn't the case. A representative said that the surprise inspections were the results of many complaints about unfit motor vehicles. He added that they would probably continue. He also stated that the surprise inspection which took place in front of my house was aimed principally at trucks. The cars that were pulled over were stopped because their owners were neglecting very obvious defects, like the guy with the Grand Prix that had no muffler.

I suppose it's unfair to surmise that these surprise inspections are just another means of boosting state revenues. After all, they will increase the safety factor of the vehicles that are cited, and gas stations that do inspections will probably become more strict as a result, too. But then again, I'm sure those drivers who were pulled aside arbitrarily from the throngs of passing vehicles, many of which got away with unsafe features, and, in many instances, written up and fined don't think the Registry's methods of selecting violators are too fair either.

Learn to babysit

Babysitting is a tremendous responsibility. Now sitters have an opportunity to sharpen their child care skills by enrolling in the babysitting course offered by the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

In addition, this eight-hour course emphasizes emergency care and accident prevention. Eleven to 15 year-olds will discuss how to conduct themselves ethically, reliably and responsibly in general and emergency situations.

Additional topics include: telephone tips, fire safety, discipline, child development, use of emergency numbers and home security.

Babysitters will also learn choke-saving, diapering and some first aid skills by practicing on manikins.

Representatives from the local fire and police departments will be guest speakers. Eleanor Entin, R.N., B.S. of the Regional Health Center's Community Health Education Department, will be the course instructor.

Advance registration is necessary by calling 657-3910, ext. 567. There is a $5 charge for the course and registration is limited to 20.

For those who complete the course, an optional babysitting registry is available to community residents wanting the names of sitters in their neighborhoods. A certificate is presented to each babysitter who completes the program.

"Beautiful" LaVerne Cassidy earns "Ugliest" prize

Two hundred Massachusetts bartenders raised $52,300 for Multiple Sclerosis during a month-long "Ugliest Bartender Contest" sponsored by Budweiser and eight Anheuser-Busch distributors.

Proving that "ugly" is really "beautiful", bartender LaVerne Cassidy of the Meadow Lounge in North Chelmsford, was the winner of the contest, reporting 15,881 votes at 25 cents each for a total of over $3,700 for MS. Cassidy won the grand prize of a trip for two. Boston bartenders, Ken Strone from the Exchange, and Paul Dateo, from Charlie's in West Roxbury, took second and third place.

Among the top leaders in the contest were Barbara Nicosia from Jilly's in North Andover, who lead the 30 or more North Shore bartenders and came in seventh in the overall contest. Barbara received 5,828 votes, raising over $1,300 for Multiple Sclerosis. Also among the top 30 overall were Danette Canning, from Hared's in Salem, and Linda Coffey from the Thirsty Whale in Newburyport.

Fitchburg bartender, Ernest J. Smith, placed fourth in the overall contest, while Donald Laskowsky and Daniel Barry, Maynard bartenders placed fifth and sixth.

North Shore Budweiser distributors who sponsored the area contest were United Liquors in Lawrence and Seaboard Products in Danvers. Budweiser salesmen joined the ugly team by delivering campaign materials to the bartenders. Each week during the contest, the top 20 bartenders were announced by WBZ, but disclosure of place was not learned until the final returns were in, keeping suspense high.

The Ugly Bartender Contest, a beauty contest in reverse, has been conducted by the Multiple Sclerosis Society throughout the country and last year bartenders raised over a million dollars to fight this disease. The February contest was the first in Massachusetts.

Under contest rules, patrons donate 25 cents for each vote cast for their favorite bartender. But ugly becomes fun and most of the bartenders got their friends to run fund-raising events — ugly contests, pie-throwing nights, auctions, and a variety of outrageous promotions.

Funds raised in the contest will support the patient service programs of the Massachusetts Chapter and the national research program to find a cause and a cure for Multiple Sclerosis.

MS-Multiple Sclerosis — strikes young adults in the prime of life. It is usually diagnosed between the ages of 15 and 50, attacking the central nervous system and blocking or scrambling nerve messages. More than 500,000 Americans have MS or related disorders.

Other North Shore bartenders participating in the contest were: from Newburyport, Shirley Downs, Elks Club; Salem, Richard Styczko at St. Joseph's Club, Mark Hackett, Major Magleashes; and Mark Claveau, Whistle Stop. In Haverhill, John G. Liapis, Lafayette Square Pub; Tootsie at Comeau's. Also, David Cargill at the Knights of Columbus and David Scanlon at Colonial Lounge, both in Lawrence; Barbara Burns, Camelot and Anne L. Christiansen, Helen's Place, both in North Andover, and Lee Ann MacNeil at the Andover Elks.

Also, Billy Forsythe, Best Western Lounge, Danvers; Eddie Szczechowicz at Central Pub in Peabody; Kenny Sarofeen, Green Tavern, Gloucester, and Robert Settles at Wheels & Wagon Bar in Saugus.

Parade (from S-5)

Hans Christian Andersen's beloved characters Thumbelina and the Ugly Duckling join forces to overcome their individual difficulties in Adele Thane's charming adaptation of these two classic tales. The barnyard residents "Sir Gobbler" and "Dowager Duck" are surprised when the Ugly Duckling they mocked returns as a handsome royal swan, and Thumbelina escapes the marriage plans of "Lord Warty" the frog and a near-sighted "Mr. Mole."

Adele Thane directs this colorful fantasy. Settings are by Kim Sammis, with costumes by Ida Redfield, lighting by George Giglio, and make-up by Paula Sutor.

Youngsters chosen from Boston Children's Theatre creative drama classes are the cast of various barnyard characters.

Group rates are available to temples, churches, scouts, PTA organizations, club, birthday parties, etc. For information and reservations, write or call the Boston Children's Theatre, 124 Holland Road, overlaid with scales — is flexible and warm, the National Geographic Society says.

Theatre review

With a warm feeling

By RICK PEARL

It isn't a particularly moving play. There isn't much excitement to it. In fact, it's a very basic, two-person dialogue that we are told covers 97 minutes. However, "Talley's Folly," which plays at the Next Move Theatre through May 8, is a production worth seeing for the simple fact that it leaves one with a warm feeling.

"Talley's Folly" won its author, Lanford Wilson, a Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1980 perhaps because it goes over some very basic values that have gotten lost in the shuffle of big Broadway productions. Perhaps this play won't ever be a big success, but I'm sure that whoever sees it won't go away disappointed. It's a sparkling, crystal-clear gem.

It is filled with hope, humor, and a bit of chutzpah, and is set in the Missouri town of Lebanon in 1944. A 42-year-old accountant, Matt Friedman, has returned to Lebanon to woo and win the reluctant spinster that he had a brief, but wonderful, affair with the summer before. Sally Talley, the 31-year-old daughter of a wealthy WASP business family, meets him in the family folly, a once glorious, now dilapidated boathouse.

Each character has reasons for holding back their love and trust of one another; Matt's family has been lost to the Germans in World War I; Sally's still badly bruised from a painful girlhood experience. How they reunite to share their secrets and fall in love is the story of this moonlight escapade.

There are tears, shouting matches, drags on cigarettes, belts of whiskey, hand-holding — all performed expertly by Maryann Plunkett as Sally and Ralph Pochoda as Matt.

Plunkett is fast becoming one of my favorites at the Next Move. She was great in the comic drama "Loose Ends" in a supporting role, and she really rises to the occasion in her lead role as Sally. Her acting is extremely realistic, and her down-home good looks and mannerisms are sure to pull on a few heart strings. She is the perfect foil to Pochoda's belligerent Jewish portrayal of Matt.

THE NEXT MOVE THEATRE presents "Talley's Folly," winner of the 1980 Pulitzer Prize for Drama, in its Boston Premiere. Limited engagement, March 23-May 8. Next Move Theatre, One Boylston Place, Boston. Previews March 20-March 22 at 8:00 p.m.; Opening night Monday, March 23 at 7:30 p.m. The performance schedule is: Tuesday-Friday at 8:00 p.m.; Saturday at 5:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m.; Sunday at 3:00 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. For tickets and information, call 423-5572. Pictured above, Maryann Plunkett as Sally Talley, Ralph Pochoda as Matt Friedman.

Pochoda has a fine sense of humor and dramatic style. This shines through in his on-stage presence. He is a fine actor and, together with Plunkett, makes this play the artistic success it is.

"Talley's Folly" has also won the Theatre Club Inc.'s Award for Best American Play of 1980, and the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for Best Play. Mr. Wilson continues his writing success which started with "The Hot L Baltimore," which also won several drama awards.

"Talley's Folly" isn't a great play, it is a fine one, and one that will leave you with a nice, warm feeling afterwards. That's a hard commodity to come by, lately.

Water will be in short supply

This winter's widespread water shortages are a signal for water supply planners to buckle down to long-range planning and improvements to delivery systems, said a group of water supply experts from the New England states, New York, and hard-hit New Jersey.

The planners, hydrologists, and water supply engineers participated in a panel discussion on "Drought in the Northeast," during the 57th quarterly meeting of the New England River Basins Commission in Boston, March 18. They generally concluded that although above average rains in February helped ease the strain on depleted water supplies, plentiful rain is needed during April and May in order to fill reservoirs before the normal summer dry spell begins in June.

Since the mid-sixties drought, the drought of record in many Northeastern states, several factors have amplified the adverse effects of below average precipitation. Increased incidence of chemical contamination of ground water, higher per capita consumption of water, and larger populations all contribute to the strain on water supplies. While the panelists expressed concern over forecasts for below normal rainfall for the next 30 days, they are encouraged by the development of more sophisticated methods for predicting precipitation and runoff which allow water suppliers to respond to water shortages with appropriate emergency measures. Voluntary conservation measures can reduce water consumption, and many communities in the Northeast are considering or implementing ways to improve the supply systems by detecting leaks, raising water rates, and rationing water during supply shortages.

A major factor in the present water shortage is evapotranspiration, the movement of water from lakes and reservoirs and from plants and soil into the atmosphere. During the 1960s drought, for example, evapotranspiration was 15 to 20 percent above normal explained Albert Kachic, Regional Hydrologist with the National Weather Service. But this year, the evapotranspiration rate has been 15 to 100 percent above normal. This means that the combined effect of a 15 to 20 inch rainfall deficiency and high evapotranspiration rates of another 10 to 15 inches is equivalent to a 25 to 30 inch rainfall deficit in a 12-month period.

Home appliance use

Electric bill: deal or disaster?

By Peter Tonge

The other day I took a hammer to a frequently used pot and struck it several times. In the process, I made it more energy-efficient by flattening out the bottom so that it sat squarely on the element. Then I repeated the exercise with several other aluminum pots and pans.

The latest rise in the electric utility bill was the reason.

The trouble, as well as the joy, of electric power is that it is all too simple to use. We flick a switch and a light goes on, the pop-up toaster gets breakfast under way, and the element turns red under the kettle.

Electricity has brought a convenience and efficiency to our lives which was inconceivable to former generations. Few of us today would want to be without it. In fact, a majority of us are probably prepared to pay, even if grudgingly, the steadily increasing price of that efficiency. My electric bill, $35 for December 1978 came in at $99 this season.

In my home then, electricity costs run to about 83 cents a day a person. That's not much more than many folks pay for a cup of coffee, decaffeinated or otherwise, and a doughnut on the way to work in the morning. In other words, with a little effort, one can still rationalize electric utility bills despite the rising costs.

On the other hand, the option to conserve is always with us whatever the cost. The housewife who retired her toaster to the scrap heap on learning that it was a heavy consumer of electricity missed the mark. While it is true that a toaster requires an impressive number of watts (1,146) to make it work, it is used for such short periods that its overall impact on the energy bill is slight.

You can get a lot of toast for the $2.40 a year it costs to run a pop-up toaster in the average home in the expensive Northeast. Similarly, the cost of electricity to power a blender in an average Northeast home is little more than 6 cents a year; and a mixer or beater twice that amount.

On the other end of the scale, the hot-water heater is likely to run to $250 a year, and almost $290 if it is a quick-recovery unit. An automatic-defrost, 17.5-cu.-foot refrigerator will cost close to $140 a year, and an automatic-defrost freezer a little more than $100 a year.

These costs are based on 6 cents a kilowatt hour, a not uncommon rate these days. Fuel-adjustment charges, of course, push these costs higher still. Because of fuel-adjustment costs in the Boston area, for example, the average rate now is 10 cents a kilowatt hour. In other words, a hot-water heater here is likely to run out at close to $425 a year; an automatic-defrost refrigerator-freezer $225.

So, knowing the more fuel-costly appliances in the home (the clothes dryer and range are next in line), we can make intelligent decisions in trying to cut costs.

If we're in the market for a new item, we can start by buying right. The federal government has made it a lot easier to choose wisely by mandating that energy-efficiency labels be attached to all major appliances. They tell us which appliances use the least energy to accomplish the same amount of work.

Then there are relatively simple steps we can take to cut energy waste with our existing appliances:

Water heater: It's the most watt-hungry piece of equipment in the home and much of its appetite comes from keeping unused water hot for hours on end. So, slow down the heat loss by insulating the tank. Kits are available from hardware stores and outlets specializing in alternative-energy items. Or you can wrap conventional pieces of fiber-glass batting around the tank, attaching it in a series of bands from the bottom up.

Also insulate the hot-water pipes as far as you can. A lot of heat is wasted en route to the faucet. Various types of insulation can be bought for this purpose from the hardware store. If you don't mind the look, you can wrap and tape newspaper, up to one-half inch thick, around the pipes.

One of the biggest hot-water savers is the reduced-flow shower head. Remember, too, the Navy way to shower: soap down first and then rinse off.

Refrigerator and freezer: Locate these appliances in the coolest parts of your kitchen. Open the doors only when necessary.

For the same reason, let hot foods cool down before refrigerating them. I know of one housewife who, in winter, allows items destined for the freezer to freeze over in an outside shed before they go into the freezer. Defrost regularly. A layer of ice, more than one-quarter-inch thick acts as an insulator, making the cooling units work harder than usual. Cover dishes tightly. This prevents frost-forming evaporation from moist foods. Keep the appliance moderately full because air is harder to keep cool and than chilled foods and liquids.

Electric range: Choose the right utensils. For maximum efficiency the cooking utensil should be as large, or very slightly larger, than the hot plate. Flat-bottomed, heavy utensils give the best results.

This brings up the reason for taking a hammer to some of our pots. Over the years they had become uneven so that they would lean to one side and not make good contact with the hot plate. A little tapping with a hammer when the utensils were hot remedied that situation.

Bake several dishes at the same time. The oven uses no more energy. In effect, you get two or more dishes for the price of one.

Following are tables which show the average annual consumption of electricity in US homes for various appliances. They were developed by the Electric Energy Association and the Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers and published in the 1980 Better Business Bureau's "Home Primer" booklet (Suffolk University, Boston, MA 02108):

Energy tax credits available

The Better Home Heat Council reminds the Massachusetts taxpayers who updated their oil heating systems to take advantage of the energy tax credits when filing their 1980 Federal Income Tax returns.

"These tax credits do not come to you automatically," according to John Carey, Chairman of the Council. "You must claim the credits on your income tax returns."

If you made any improvements to your system such as:

replacement burner; flue opening modifications; or automatic set-back thermostat; you can claim 15 percent of the first $2,000 or a maximum of $300.

In a study done for the Better Home Heat Council and the Executive Office of Energy Resources, it was determined that a replacement flame retention burner could save up to 18.5 percent on fuel consumption. These new burners are designed to substantially reduce consumption by increasing combustion efficiency of the present oil furnace.

Flue opening modifications minimize energy use by reducing the flow of air in the chimney when the furnace is not in use. The automatic set-back thermostat allows a person to set the temperature of the home at two different levels — one for high demand and one for low demand. The instrument mechanically adjusts to the desired setting.

Carey added, "In keeping with the Department of Energy's stand for conservation, conversions to natural gas are not tax deductible."

He continued, "These tax credits are available to both the homeowner and the renter who have made these improvements."

Additionally, often overlooked tax credits include insulation, storm or thermal windows and doors, caulking, and weather stripping. The Internal Revenue Service has a detailed publication (Energy Credits for Individuals, Publication 903) giving the specifics of these credits.

Swiss veal dishes an alpine delight

By Phyllis Hanes

Switzerland's international culinary reputation rests largely on its cheeses and cheese dishes. But anyone who has been to Switzerland knows that the country is also famous for the dishes made with veal. The Swiss know how to prepare and serve veal to perfection, and any traveler who visits the country would find it well worth the effort to try not just one but several of the veal dishes on most menus.

One of the best-known of the Swiss veal dishes is served in several variations in different parts of the country. Found in the German-speaking part of Switzerland it is Zurich's Geschnetzeltes Kalbfleisch. It is thin strips of veal carefully sauteed in a cream sauce. It is also made in the Suisse-Romande region, where it is called Emince de Veau.

Sometimes calves liver is substituted for veal and the dish is called Lebergeschmetzeltes. When chicken is cooked in the same style it is called Emince de Volaille.

Listed on the menu as L'Emince de Veau a la Zurichoise Rosti, it is the veal dish of Zurich, served with Rosti, a traditional golden potato cake.

Other veal dishes on the menu were veal scallops served with green noodles; veal steak with mushrooms in a cream sauce; veal kidneys, southern France style; minced veal liver, and more.

These and other traditional Swiss dishes are found at their best in four of Zurich's famous historic medieval guild buildings, now superb restaurants.

One of these, the Guildhouse zur Schmeiden, is more than 550 years old and was once the blacksmith's guild. Another, Guildhouse zur Saffron, was the merchants and spice dealers guild hall.

The Kronenhalle, more than a century old, has a very special atmosphere with paintings by Picasso, Miro, Chagall, Matisse, and Giacometti.

The fourth, where I enjoyed a superb veal dish, is Haus zum Ruten. Typical in its medieval architecture with a huge Gothic wooden ceiling, the restaurant has an excellent selection of traditional Swiss dishes including the town's veal specialty.

I had the veal with mushrooms, tender and creamy, a luxurious dish, perfectly prepared, but not heavy. The menu is complete with elegant appetizers, soups, fish, and grilled meats. The service, as all over Switzerland, is impeccable.

Enjoying fondue in a small, cozy Swiss restaurant

At these restaurants there is always a good selection of excellent Swiss cheeses and a fine selection of pastries and desserts from fresh strawberries flown from Israel with ice cream or whipped cream, to peaches and pears and Souffle Glace.

Here are some recipes that will allow you to enjoy some of the cuisine of Switzerland.

Veal with Mushroom Cream Sauce

1 pound veal scallops
1/2 cup flour
1/4 cup clarified butter or half oil and half butter
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots or scallions
3/4 pound mushrooms, sliced
1/2 cup heavy cream
Salt, pepper, and paprika to taste
1/2 cup heavy cream, lightly whipped
Minced parsley for garnish

Cut veal into julienne strips, 1/4 inch thick, about 2 inches long and 1/2 inch wide. Pat dry with paper towels and sprinkle with flour. Melt butter or oil in heavy skillet and when foam subsides drop in the veal strips and saute, stirring constantly with a fork for about 2 to 5 minutes, until golden. Remove veal to a serving dish and keep warm. Cook remaining meat the same way.

Add 2 tablespoons butter to skillet and saute shallots until soft, about 2 minutes, then add mushrooms and saute mixture about 2 minutes more.

Add 1/2 cup cream and seasonings to taste and cook mixture over medium heat until it thickens slightly. Fold in lightly whipped cream and pour sauce over veal. Sprinkle with parsley. Serves 4.

Veal Cordon Bleu

4 veal scallops, about 4 ounces each
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
1/2 cup flour
1/4 pound Swiss Gruyere cheese
4 slices boiled ham, about 3 inches square, 1/4 inch thick
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup vegetable oil
4 thin lemon slices
Paprika
Bread crumbs

Veal scallops should be about 3/4 of an inch thick and pounded about 1/4 inch thick. Lightly beat eggs with milk, then brush each scallop on one side with the mixture, then sprinkle lightly with flour.

Cut cheese into 4 strips, each 3 inches long, 1 inch wide, and 1/4 inch thick. Slice ham 1/4 inch thick and about 3 inches square. Wrap each strip of cheese in a slice of ham and place lengthwise in the center of the coated side of a scallop. Fold scallop in half lengthwise to make a 6-inch long packet enclosing ham and cheese completely. Press edges firmly together to seal tightly.

One at a time coat scallops with remaining flour and shake or brush off excess. Dip first in remaining egg mixture, then in bread crumbs, thoroughly coating with crumbs. Place scallops side by side on plate or wax paper and refrigerate for at least 1 hour.

In a heavy 12-inch skillet, melt butter and oil over moderate heat until foam subsides. Add scallops, turning occasionally with tongs or slotted spoon and fry for 15 to 20 minutes until golden brown and crisp on both sides.

Drain on paper towels and serve at once from a heated platter. Top each scallop with a slice of lemon sprinkled lightly with paprika.

Poland Spring Inn

Nothing nailed down

Go into any hotel in America, if you find pictures at all they're screwed to the walls. The clock radio beside the bed is firmly anchored to the night table. The TV is on an alarm system. Move it a few inches and red lights flash in the security office. All of this says "we know that many of you are thieves and we're going to do everything possible to protect our property from you" and still the thefts go on to the tune of millions of dollars.

This may be an open invitation to the Disorganized Thieves of America Association, but nothing is nailed down at Poland Spring...and now in our tenth year our losses have been well under a hundred dollars!

I think that there are several reasons for this. First we have avoided plastering the rooms and lobby areas with things bearing our name. Secondly, and most important, no one here feels "ripped off" and the urge to "get even" for paying a typically high resort rate will in some cases "justify" a little theft. After all, the thinking goes, I'm paying these people $100.00 a day for each of us I should take home a few towels or maybe the TV. When you're paying about $16.00 a day and that includes two of Cyndi Robbins delicious meals it's rather hard to justify stealing her furniture too!

This year will mark the official opening of the Presidential Inn at Poland Spring. Across the golf course from the now familiar Inn at Poland Spring stands this last example of the Victorian hotel. One hundred small typical turn of the century hotel rooms have been transformed into 38 lovely rooms, all with private baths and showers. Each of these rooms has been dedicated to a President of the United States. Although all the rooms are furnished alike, with gigantic presidential sized beds, (same as king size but more democratic) each room is decorated with portraits, memorabilia, posters, campaign buttons, etc., of the president that room honors. Many of these things are collectors items. Many of them took months for Mel and Cyndi Robbins to locate, buy, and properly frame. Nothing is nailed down.

"The effort was so great," said Mel Robbins the Innkeeper of all of the Inns at Poland Spring, "that we could finish about half the rooms and are still searching for materials for Presidents like Van Buren, and Pierce that are not as easy to come by as Kennedy or FDR memorabilia." "Aren't you worried about people taking some of these things as souvenirs of a weekend in the Lincoln room?" we asked Mel. "I think most people will appreciate the opportunity of living with history, if even for just a weekend. I know that they'll understand that many of the items are irreplaceable and that Cyndi and I went to a great deal of trouble and expense to have all there for their pleasure. They will quickly realize that we didn't furnish these rooms through a hotel supply house catalogue. That each room is as unique as they are...and above all that we trust them." "Do you think it will work," we asked. Mel Robbins thought a moment and then said "I sure hope so. We've tried a lot of unusual things here in the ten years and everyone in the hotel business told us that we would fail. When we stopped taking credit cards, when we asked people to bring their own soap, when we offered a weekend for $25.00, people still don't believe that, when we eliminated kids, and tipping, all of these things and more were directly opposite to what it says in the hotel manuals...but at Poland Spring that's the way we do things and most people find it very refreshing.

The Poland Spring Inns are unique. They have maintained a weekend rate starting at $25.00 since 1972 and a summer rate that averages about $16.00 a day, including two all you can eat meals. You can get their latest brochure and reservation form by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to: Mel and Cyndi, Poland Spring, Maine 04274. Mel tells us that asking people to pay their own postage has made it possible to keep 1981 rates just about the same as last year...unique.

Reserve for your camping site

Advance computerized campground reservations are now available for seven national parks during the 1981 camping season. Deputy Director Steven H. Lewis of the National Park Service's North Atlantic Region announced today.

"Began in 1979, the computerized reservation system has provided a high level of public service to thousands of campers using some of the nation's most popular national parks," Lewis said.

Reservations for up to eight weeks in advance can be made by visiting any Ticketron outlet or by mailing a special form available from the National Park Service. Computerized reservations can be made for the following parks: Grand Canyon National Park, Arizona; Rocky Mountain National Park, Colorado; Yosemite and Sequoia-Kings Canyon National Parks, California; Cape Hatteras National Seashore, North Carolina; Great Smokey Mountains National Park, North Carolina-Tennessee; Shenandoah National Park, Virginia. The seven parks have a total of 17 campgrounds which in turn have more than 3,000 campsites.

The fee for making advanced computerized reservations is $1.75 for each reservation. Ticketron requires two weeks from time of receipt to process mail reservations.

In addition to the parks using the computerized system, the six parks listed below maintain individual campground reservation systems. For reservations, contact: Acadia National Park, Rte. 1, Box 1, Bar Harbor, Me. 04609; Cumberland Island National Seashore, P.O. Box 806, St. Mary's, Ga. 31558; Dinosaur National Monument (boat access campgrounds only), P.O. Box 210, Dinosaur, Co. 81610; Ozark National Scenic Riverways, P.O. Boston's Parker House

Weekend vacation nearby

You can't possibly get away from home and business long enough for a much-needed vacation to Bermuda, or Florida, or even New York, you say.

Take heart! Weekend vacations have taken the country by storm, as the ideal way to "get away from it all" for a few days, minimizing the time and expense of the welcome break from routine.

Just a short drive across the Charles River to Boston, is the famous 125-year-old Parker House hotel at the corner of Tremont and School streets, which offers lower rates and enticing extras for an in-town weekend vacation.

Your weekend vacation package begins with a friendly greeting from the doorman, who valet-parks your car for the "duration."

Ensnored in your room (or suite, if one is available) you begin to relax and look forward to the other features of your Classic Weekend. In addition to deluxe accommodations, the package includes dinner for two one night in Parker's elegant restaurant; breakfast for two both days, and other amenities.

The multi-million dollar renovation of this Dunfee hotel which is now under the

THE LOBBY OF BOSTON'S FAMOUS PARKER HOUSE reflects how the 125-year-old hotel has managed to preserve its historic elegance and charm throughout its recent multi-million dollar renovation. The hotel now combines contemporary guest rooms and modern amenities with its traditional luxury and hospitality.

corporate umbrella of Irish Airlines - Aer Lingus, caused one visitor to remark that the "Parker House is like a dowager in her prime."

Certainly there is no denying there's an air of grace and style in every corner of the Parker House, with its 546 newly refurbished rooms.

Its lobby and dining rooms gleam with warm polished wood paneling, shimmering chandeliers, bouquets of fresh flowers in profusion, and the hallmark of a fine hotel) a corps of service personnel who are almost European in their desire to please, and make your stay a memorable one.

When Saturday dawns, there's lots to occupy your day, since the Parker House is at the center of it all. There's Faneuil Hall-Quincy Marketplace with its intriguing shops, strolling musicians, and ethnic foods; Downtown Crossing with Filene's Basement nearby; the waterfront; the Aquarium, Boston Common, Beacon Hill, interesting shopping areas, and the theater district.

As the day winds down, a restful cocktail hour precedes dinner at Parker's fabulous restaurant. Elegant furnishings, marvelous service and a selection of gourmet dinners set the stage for dining. It doesn't matter whether you chose Steak Diane, flambeed at your table; or Veal Piccata; or Chateaubriand, when dessert time arrives you will find it difficult to decide between chocolate mousse pie, or that confection of huge fresh strawberries enticing you from the heavily laden dessert trolley.

The Parker House also has another, completely different restaurant, The Last Hurrah, which boasts a lively swing orchestra, and a more relaxed atmosphere. Good food is served here in a setting of photos of Boston's former and famous politicians.

Chances are you have been thinking you can't take time for a vacation just now. But with the Boston skyline beckoning from the shores of the Charles, what's your excuse for not enjoying just a weekend away? The Parker House is only a stone's throw away in miles, but it's a million light years away in environment. And come Monday morning, you will be a new person!!

PART-TIMERS AND RETIREES

We seek a few special people — mature, articulate, business-oriented individuals — to participate in our Prospect Development Group.

You will contact, via telephone, executives of "Fortune 1,000" companies to compile data on prospective organizations which may be developed into customers for our systems; a proven marketing approach which has propelled DMS growth from 15 to 130 people in less than five years.

The job requires motivated individuals with business acumen, who are familiar with such disciplines as finance, computers and distribution; people who can deal effectively with managers and executives.

DMS is a rapidly growing international leader in the design of massive, computerized business systems; networks that now process over $15 billion of the GNP.

If you are looking for an opportunity to put your business knowledge to work for you and share in the exciting environment of a rapidly growing company while working up to 20 hours per week, we urge you to investigate this opportunity.

Carole Flynn, our Personnel Manager, would like to tell you more about DMS and what this project offers you. Call Carole at 275-2000, or send your resume to her attention.

MORTGAGE MONEY FOR THE ASKING

QUESTION: My husband and I are about to list our house for sale. However, we're concerned that it may linger on the market for an extended period of time.

I think our primary concern is that potential buyers will be unable to qualify for the financing they need. Do you have any ideas or comments?

ANSWER: Generally, when home interest rates rise to high levels, fewer prospective borrowers qualify for home loans. The resulting slowdown in the real estate market often makes it difficult to effect a satisfactory sale. This is especially true for those sellers who try to get the maximum price on an "all cash" basis.

An unsold home in this type of market can mean costly and irritating delays. But if you're willing to help a buyer finance the purchase, your home can normally be sold in a relatively short period of time.

Your broker can help you structure a sale in which you can receive part of your purchase price in cash and another part in the form of a note secured by a mortgage. By doing this, you and the purchaser won't be locked into the rigid mortgage formulas that bind institutional lenders.

In times of relatively high interest rates, you can negotiate a mortgage that is both affordable for the purchaser and a sound investment for you and your husband.

Closing Comments

If you have a question about real estate or require the services of a professional Realtor, Mr. Litchfield will be happy to assist you. Contact Realty World-Classic Realty, 577 Main Street, Woburn MA 01801 (617) 935-9666.
